Students will explore ancient histories around the world, beginning with an overview of the ancient river valley societies in Israel, Egypt, and India. Students will learn how to Write, Read and Think like a Historian as we transition to the classical civilizations of China, Greece, and Rome with a focus on their contributions to modern civilization. Technology tools like Google Earth, Edpuzzle, and Kahoot will expand on student knowledge in a meaningful manner that promotes historical and critical thinking. The students learning experience will culminate with a four-part cartoon with captions or an advertisement that depicts or promotes a new society using a combination of words, symbols, and simple images to share the geographic features, social structure, and religious ideals of one of the societies they studied.

Reading Like a Historian

This course uses historical inquiry to engage students, each historical topic has a central question that students will investigate. Students will use reading strategies such as: sourcing, contextualizing, and close reading to address historical questions. Students are not forced to memorize historical dates instead they will evaluate the trustworthiness of differing perspectives on historical issues and learn how to make a historical claim that is supported evidence.

Writing like a Historian

Writing is an essential part of the learning process historical writing forces students to use their knowledge of a subject to construct a compelling narrative that makes sense from the evidence they gathered. Students will use play posit, Kidblog, or VoiceThread or another form of technology that allows them to investigate the following questions:

- Who wrote this?
- What is the author's perspective?
- Why was it written?
- When was it written?
- Where was it written?
- Is this source reliable? Why? Why not?

Vocabulary Instruction

Vocabulary instruction is the key to literacy, often students that struggle in Social Studies an attributing cause can be the lack of vocabulary instruction. Vocabulary knowledge encompasses all the words students must know to learn and understand major concepts, it helps students access background knowledge, express their ideas and communicate effectively. To engage and assist students we will use Kahoot, flip grid, or some other form of engaging activity.
